Theaters

New York City is home to some of the most iconic movie theaters in the world. The AMC Loews Lincoln Square is the largest multiplex in the city, with 13 screens and a huge IMAX theater. The Angelika Film Center is a beloved independent cinema that specializes in foreign and arthouse films. And the IFC Center is a great place to catch independent and documentary films.

If you're looking for a truly unique moviegoing experience, check out the Nitehawk Cinema. This theater serves dinner and drinks during screenings, so you can enjoy a meal while you watch your movie.

Film festivals

New York City hosts a number of film festivals throughout the year, including the Tribeca Film Festival, the New York Film Festival, and the DOC NYC documentary film festival. These festivals offer a chance to see new and upcoming films from around the world, as well as meet filmmakers and attend special events.

If you're planning a trip to New York City during a film festival, be sure to check the festival website for a schedule of events.

Filming locations

New York City has been the setting for countless films over the years. Some of the most famous filming locations include the Empire State Building, the Brooklyn Bridge, and Central Park. If you're a fan of a particular film, you can take a guided tour of its filming locations.

Or, you can just wander around the city and see if you can spot any familiar landmarks. You never know, you might just stumble upon the spot where your favorite movie was filmed.

Other film-related attractions

In addition to theaters, film festivals, and filming locations, New York City is also home to a number of other film-related attractions. The Museum of the Moving Image (MoMI) is a great place to learn about the history of film and see exhibits on your favorite movies. And the Anthology Film Archives is a non-profit cinema that specializes in preserving and presenting independent and experimental films.

If you're looking for a more hands-on experience, you can take a film class at the New York Film Academy. Or, you can volunteer at one of the city's many film festivals.

Planning your trip

If you're planning a film-themed trip to New York City, there are a few things you'll want to keep in mind. First, decide what types of films you're interested in seeing. If you're a fan of independent films, you'll want to focus on theaters and festivals that specialize in those types of films. If you're more interested in mainstream Hollywood movies, you'll want to check out the larger multiplex theaters.

Once you know what types of films you want to see, you can start planning your itinerary. Be sure to check the websites of theaters and film festivals for schedules and ticket information. You'll also want to allow plenty of time to explore the city and see some of the famous filming locations.

With so much to see and do, New York City is the perfect place for a film lover's vacation. So start planning your trip today, and get ready to experience the magic of the movies in the Big Apple.
