Original Lyrics

Trap little pigs, trap little pigs,
Let me come in, let me come in.
No, no, no, not by the hair of my chinny chin chin.
Yes, yes, yes, let me come in.
I won't eat you, I won't eat you.
No, no, no, not by the hair of my chinny chin chin.
Yes, yes, yes, let me come in.

Lyrically Accurate Version

The first verse of the song is a trap set by the wolf. He's trying to trick the little pigs into letting him in so he can eat them. The pigs are wise to his plan and refuse to let him in.

In the second verse, the wolf tries to convince the pigs that he won't eat them. He promises, "I won't eat you, I won't eat you." But the pigs know better and continue to refuse to let him in.

The third verse is the climax of the song. The wolf gets angry and threatens to huff and puff and blow the house down. The pigs are scared, but they stand their ground and refuse to let him in.

In the end, the wolf huffs and puffs and blows the house down. But the pigs are safe because they have already escaped. The song ends with the pigs singing, "We won't be fooled again."

The Meaning of the Song

The song "Trap Little Pigs" is a cautionary tale about the dangers of trusting strangers. The wolf represents the dangers of the outside world, while the pigs represent the innocence of children. The song teaches children to be careful who they trust and to never let their guard down.

The song "Trap Little Pigs" is a classic for a reason. It's a fun and catchy song that also teaches children an important lesson about safety. The lyrically accurate version of the song helps to explain the song's true meaning and makes it even more valuable for children.
