

Watch My Smoke: The Eric Dickerson Story

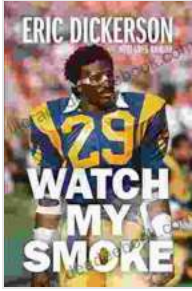

From Humble Beginnings to NFL Stardom

Eric Dickerson was born on September 2, 1960, in Sealy, Texas. He was the ninth of ten children born to sharecropper parents. Dickerson grew up in poverty and often had to work on the family farm to help make ends meet. Despite his difficult circumstances, Dickerson was a gifted athlete. He excelled in football, basketball, and track and field.

In high school, Dickerson was a two-time All-State running back. He rushed for over 2,000 yards and scored 30 touchdowns his senior season.

Dickerson was heavily recruited by major college football programs, but he ultimately chose to attend Southern Methodist University (SMU).

At SMU, Dickerson quickly became one of the most dominant running backs in college football. He led the nation in rushing in 1981 and 1982 and set the NCAA record for career rushing yards with 4,800. Dickerson was a two-time All-American and won the Heisman Trophy in 1982.

In 1983, Dickerson was selected by the Los Angeles Rams with the second overall pick in the NFL Draft. He immediately became a star in the NFL, rushing for over 1,000 yards in each of his first four seasons. In 1984, Dickerson set the NFL single-season rushing record with 2,105 yards. He was named the NFL Offensive Player of the Year and was selected to the Pro Bowl five times.

Dickerson's NFL career was cut short by injuries, but he still finished with over 12,000 rushing yards and 90 touchdowns. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1999.
